More evidence Whites were well-established in America as original settlers.

Pretty much all our lives, liberal academics and the liberal media have done their best to make White people feel guilty about “what they did to the Indians.” Well, more and more evidence is piling up that the first settlers of America were White people. Notice that the liberals aren’t asking the question: What did the Indians do to the original White settlers of America? Contrary to the endless liberal smears, White people actually tried bringing civilization and Christianity to the Indians. Many of the missions in California are still standing as proof of this. And don’t forget the reservations that Indians in the US possess to this day. Many of these tribes (or at least the Indian chiefs) are growing rich off casinos and White gamblers who can’t find better ways to squander their money.

White people bought the Island of Manhattan from the original Indians and were more than happy making deals with the Indians rather than fighting them. The Indians are guilty of more than a few massacres including the earliest English settlement at Roanoke and the men that Columbus left behind at La Navidad. Much of the slaughter of Indians was due to the accidental introduction of small pox. Perhaps Whites should think twice about leaving the immigration door wide open to the Third World, considering the recent alarm about the Avian Flu. A recent news article reports “A biochemical analysis of a rare Clovis-era stone tool cache recently unearthed in the city limits of Boulder, Colo., indicates some of the implements were used to butcher ice-age camels and horses that roamed North America until their extinction about 13,000 years ago, according to a University of Colorado at Boulder study... The Clovis culture is believed by many archaeologists to coincide with the time the first Americans arrived on the continent...about 13,000 to 13,500 years ago, Bamforth said.” Some of the oldest human fossils found in America include Kennewick Man and the Spirit cave mummy, who both show signs of European origin dating back more than 9,000 years ago. One website notes “The controversial Solutrean hypothesis proposed in 1999 by Smithsonian archaeologist Dennis Stanford and colleague Bruce Bradley (Stanford and Bradley 2002), suggests that the Clovis people could have inherited technology from the Solutrean people who lived in southern Europe 21,000-15,000 years ago, and who created the first Stone Age artwork in present-day southern France.[18] The link is suggested by the similarity in technology between the projectile points of the Solutreans and those of the Clovis people. Such a theory would require that the Solutreans crossed via the edge of the pack ice in the North Atlantic Ocean that then extended to the Atlantic coast of France. They could have done this using survival skills similar to those of the modern Inuit people. Supporters of this hypothesis suggest that stone tools found at Cactus Hill (an early American site in Virginia), are knapped in a style between Clovis and Solutrean. Other scholars such as Emerson F. Greenman and Remy Cottevieille-Giraudet have also suggested a Northern Atlantic point of entry, citing toolmaking similarities between Clovis and Solutrean-era artifacts.”

Israel launches covert war against Iran

It is using hitmen, sabotage, front companies and double agents to disrupt the regime's illicit weapons project, the experts say. The most dramatic element of the "decapitation" programme is the planned assassination of top figures involved in Iran's atomic operations. Despite fears in Israel and the US that Iran is approaching the point of no return in its ability to build atom bomb, Israeli officials are aware of the change in mood in Washington since President Barack Obama took office. They privately acknowledge the new US administration is unlikely to sanction an air attack on Iran's nuclear installations and Mr Obama's offer to extend a hand of peace to Tehran puts any direct military action beyond reach for now.

The aim is to slow down or interrupt Iran's research programme, without the gamble of a direct confrontation that could lead to a wider war. A former CIA officer on Iran told The Daily Telegraph: "Disruption is designed to slow progress on the programme, done in such a way that they don't realise what's happening. You are never going to stop it. "The goal is delay, delay, delay until you can come up with some other solution or approach. We certainly don't want the current Iranian government to have those weapons. It's a good policy, short of taking them out militarily, which probably carries unacceptable risks." Reva Bhalla, a senior analyst with Stratfor, the US private intelligence company with strong government security connections, said the strategy was to take out key people.

"With co-operation from the United States, Israeli covert operations have focused both on eliminating key human assets involved in the nuclear programme and in sabotaging the Iranian nuclear supply chain," she said. "As US-Israeli relations are bound to come under strain over the Obama administration's outreach to Iran, and as the political atmosphere grows in complexity, an intensification of Israeli covert activity against Iran is likely to result."

Mossad was rumoured to be behind the death of Ardeshire Hassanpour, a top nuclear scientist at Iran's Isfahan uranium plant, who died in mysterious circumstances from reported "gas poisoning" in 2007. Other recent deaths of important figures in the procurement and enrichment process in Iran and Europe have been the result of Israeli "hits", intended to deprive Tehran of key technical skills at the head of the programme, according to Western intelligence analysts. "Israel has shown no hesitation in assassinating weapons scientists for hostile regimes in the past," said a European intelligence official, speaking on condition of anonymity. They did it with Iraq and they will do it with Iran when they can." Mossad's covert operations cover a range of activities. The former CIA operative revealed how Israeli and US intelligence co-operated with European companies working in Iran to obtain photographs and other confidential material about Iranian nuclear and missile sites. "It was a real company that operated from time to time in Iran and in the nature of their legitimate business came across information on various suspect Iranian facilities," he said.

Israel has also used front companies to infiltrate the Iranian purchasing network that the clerical regime uses to circumvent United Nations sanctions and obtain so-called "dual use" items – metals, valves, electronics, machinery – for its nuclear programme. The businesses initially supply Iran with legitimate material, winning Tehran's trust, and then start to deliver faulty or defective items that "poison" the country's atomic activities. "Without military strikes, there is still considerable scope for disrupting and damaging the Iranian programme and this has been done with some success," said Yossi Melman, a prominent Israeli journalist who covers security and intelligence issues for the Haaretz newspaper. Mossad and Western intelligence operations have also infiltrated the Iranian nuclear programme and "bought" information from prominent atomic scientists. Israel has later selectively leaked some details to its allies, the media and United Nations atomic agency inspectors. On one occasion, Iran itself is understood to have destroyed a nuclear facility near Tehran, bulldozing over the remains and replacing it with a football pitch, after its existence was revealed to UN inspectors. The regime feared that the discovery by inspectors of an undeclared nuclear facility would result in overwhelming pressure at the UN for tougher action against Iran.

The Iranian government has become so concerned about penetration of its programme that it has announced arrests of alleged spies in an attempt to discourage double agents. "Israel is part of a detailed and elaborate international effort to slow down the Iranian programme," said Mr Melman. But Vince Canastraro, the former CIA counter-terrorism chief, expressed doubts about the efficacy of secret Israeli operations against Iran. "You cannot carry out foreign policy objectives via covert operations," he said. "You can't get rid of a couple of people and hope to affect Iran's nuclear capability." Iran has consistently asserted that it is pursuing a nuclear capability for civilian energy generation purposes. But Israeli and Western intelligence agencies believe the 20-year-old programme, which was a secret until 2002, is designed to give the ruling mullahs an atom bomb.

The banksters' engineered looting of our economies is causing mass protests all over Europe. The latest was today in Dublin, Ireland.

DUBLIN (AFP) – Up to 120,000 protesters brought Dublin city centre to a standstill on Saturday over government austerity measures aimed at stabilising the once high-flying economy now wracked by recession. The demonstration came a day after the global economic crisis led to another political casualty elsewhere in Europe, with Latvia's prime minister quitting as his country grapples with deepening recession. Organised by the Irish Congress of Trade Unions (ICTU) and featuring teachers, police, civil servants and others, the Irish protest was the “first step in a rolling campaign of action,” ICTU general secretary David Begg said.

Police put the number of protesters at up to 120,000. Marchers are particularly opposed to a pension levy on some 350,000 public servants which is designed to save about 1.4 billion Euros (1.8 billion dollars) this year. According to IMPACT, Ireland's biggest public sector trade union, the levy will cost low to middle-income earners between 1,500 Euros and 2,800 Euros a year. Irish Prime Minister Brian Cowen is bringing in an initial two-billion-euro package of cuts designed to stabilise the one-time Celtic Tiger economy, which entered recession in the first half of 2008. Cowen has said the economy will shrink by up to 10 percent by 2010 and warned of total savings of 15 billion Euros needed over five years in a bid to stabilise Irish finances. In a statement to coincide with the demonstration, the government said it recognised that the measures it was taking “are difficult and, in some cases, painful” but they were also “necessary and fair.” “They are necessary because it is essential that we show a credible start on the correction of an emerging un-sustainability in our public finances,” it said. (...)

The global economic crisis, which has hit several European countries hard, has led to political instability in several parts of the continent. Iceland's government became the first political casualty of the downturn when it was forced to step down on January 26 following months of protests against politicians and central bankers. A new interim government comprising the Social Democrats and the Left Green party has been in power since February 1, and new elections are expected to be held in April. More recently, Latvia's Prime Minister Ivars Godmanis quit his position on Friday, amid widespread discontent over belt-tightening and politicians' alleged corruption and nepotism.

Latvia showed the fastest economic growth in the European Union in 2006 but its economy is expected to contract 12 percent this year, with unemployment soaring to 12.7 percent from the current 8.3 percent. Fellow Baltic states Lithuania and Estonia face similar troubles.”

Watch out! There could be a new tax on the mileage you drive.

One of the many seldom-spoken items on the left-liberal agenda, in addition to their war on eating meat and shoving all the races together at all times, is a long-standing war against the private automobile. Liberals don't like cars, especially big ones. Cars enable White Americans to flee the social and economic rat traps (the big multi-racial cities) that liberals create. White people take their assets and their tax base with them, leaving liberal cities like San Francisco and New York with nothing but Third World rabble, who quickly become 99 percent of the bus passengers in many of these cities. Cars make Americans mobile, and it is much more difficult to corral and confine and dictate to a mobile population. Liberals want everyone riding public transportation like most people do in Europe, controlled by powerful socialist unions who can shut down a country at will.

Before the new tax

Obama and his people are now beginning to advance this plank in their lefty-liberal platform. A recent news reports "Transportation Secretary Ray LaHood says he wants to consider taxing motorists based on how many miles they drive rather than how much gasoline they burn - an idea that has angered drivers in some states where it has been proposed. Gasoline taxes that for nearly half a century have paid for the federal share of highway and bridge construction can no longer be counted on to raise enough money to keep the nation's transportation system moving, LaHood said in an interview... 'We should look at the vehicular miles program where people are actually clocked on the number of miles that they travelled,' the former Illinois Republican lawmaker said." In other words, let's wipe out White suburbia by making it prohibitively expensive to commute. Getting turncoat RINO Republicans to advance the most obnoxious points of the lefty-lib agenda is what Obongo refers to as "bi-partisanship" and bears all the fingerprints of the real power behind the empty suit, Israeli dual-citizen Rahm Emanuel. And why can't gas taxes pay for road repairs? Is it perhaps a result of liberals plundering money collected from the gas tax and spending it all on illegal aliens rather than on keeping up the roads?

The article continues "Most transportation experts see a vehicle miles travelled tax as a long-term solution, but Congress is being urged to move in that direction now by funding pilot projects. The idea also is gaining ground in several states. Governors in Idaho and Rhode Island are talking about such programs, and a North Carolina panel suggested in December the state start charging motorists a quarter-cent for every mile as a substitute for the gas tax. A tentative plan in Massachusetts to use GPS chips in vehicles to charge motorists by the mile has drawn complaints from drivers who say it's an Orwellian intrusion by government into the lives of citizens." This would have been an Orwellian intrusion by government into the lives of citizens if the liberals got away with it, and the fact that it was being seriously considered is extremely ominous.

Thankfully there was a HUGE backlash against this brand new "mileage tax" and it has disappeared for the time being. This won't be the last time that Obama and his socialist pals propose an oppressive new tax that no one even imagined before. That's what liberals do: They tax and spend. They won't ever cut their spending enough to balance the budget so that means huge deficits or higher taxes. All the fools who voted for Obama thinking that he was going to lower their taxes should feel free to start kicking themselves about now.

Our car after the new tax.

Commander George Lincoln Rockwell.

Born 9th March 1918
Bloomington, Ill.

Died 25th August 1967
Arlington, Virginia.

The True American Hero.

Commander Rockwell was born the oldest of three children, in Bloomington, Illinois, his father of British descent and a mother of German descent. In 1938 he entered Brown University in Providence, Rhode Island and majored in Philosophy. While still in university he thought it would not be long before the United States would enter the war against Germany. So he decided to leave the university and joined the United States Navy where in 1940 he attended flight schools in Massachusetts and Florida.

Whilst aboard the USS Pastores he managed to put down a race riot between white southerners and black Americans who had been put together in the same quarters. With his usual quick thinking he solved the problem and separated the two races into different quarters. In 1943 he married Judy Aultman whom he has met while at university. The marriage was dissolved in 1952 after his posting to Iceland. In 1953 he met Thora Hallgrimsdottir and were married in the Icelandic National Cathedral, then they had their honeymoon in Berchtesgaden in Germany.

July 1958, Commander Rockwell had picketed the White House protesting the sending of troops to the middle east, and it was during this time when he received a package containing an 18 foot Swastika flag. With this flag he made an altar with the Fuehrer's photo in the center and three candles in front. It was then that he and some of his supporters swore allegiance to their leader. In 1959 Commander Rockwell formed the World Union of Free Enterprise National Socialists, this was changed in the December to American Nazi Party and the HQ moved to North Randolph Street in Arlington, Virginia.

In 1962 he travelled to England where he met up with Colin Jordan and co-founded the World Union of National Socialists.

25th August 1967 while Cdr Rockwell came out of a laundromat that he was murdered by one of his own men, John Patler who was later charged for the murder. Here I will leave the story of this great American and encourage you as National Socialist to read up on the Hero of our time. As you can see from his medals he has always fought for the betterment of the people of America, he never flinched from his duties. DVDs on Commander Rockwell can be bought from NSM Records and well worth having. Also more information can be found on the internet. We will win. Sieg Heil!

Clint Eastwood goes gunning for PC killjoys by saying we should laugh at race-based jokes

Clint Eastwood believes the rise of political correctness is no laughing matter. He says the world would be a better place if we could still laugh at inoffensive jokes about different races. The Hollywood actor and director, 78, said we live in constant fear of being labelled racist for simply laughing about national stereotypes. 'People have lost their sense of humour,' he told Germany's Der Spiegel magazine. 'In former times we constantly made jokes about different races. 'You can only tell them today with one hand over your mouth otherwise you will be insulted as a racist. 'I find that ridiculous. In those earlier days every friendly clique had a "Sam the Jew" or "Jose the Mexican" - but we didn't think anything of it or have a racist thought.

It was normal that we made jokes based on our nationality or ethnicity. That was never a problem. "I don't want to be politically correct. We're all spending too much time and energy trying to be politically correct about everything.'

Punk! Make my day.

Is the Big Brother State already in Europe?

Personal data of innocent citizens must be made available to the Government to combat terrorism, according to an influential former security chief. Sir David Omand, Whitehall's former and security and intelligence coordinator, called for unprecedented Big Brother powers to allow access to private details - including phone records, emails and travel information - to be given to the intelligence services. Setting out a hugely controversial blueprint for the future of national security he said 'moral rules' about individual privacy would have to be broken.

His 17-page report calls for the creation of a vast state database to gather information about terrorist groups which are increasingly recruiting and operating online. But he argued that a citizen's right to privacy would have to be sacrificed to allow 'intrusive' intelligence techniques. 'Finding out other people's secrets is going to involve breaking everyday moral rules', he wrote. 'This is personal information about individuals that resides in databases, such as advance passenger information, airline bookings and other travel data, passport and biometric data, immigration, identity and border records, criminal records, and other governmental and private sector data, including financial and telephone and other communications records.' 'Modern intelligence access will often involve intrusive methods of surveillance and investigation, accepting that, in some respects, this may have to be at the expense of some aspects of privacy rights.'

The paper 'National Security Strategy and Implication for the UK Intelligence Community' was published last week by the influential New Labour think tank, the Institute of Public Policy Research. Sir Omand left the senior civil service in 2005 but his views still hold great sway in the corridors of power. He added: 'This is a hard choice and goes against current calls to curb the so-called surveillance society - but it is greatly preferable to tinkering with the rule of law, or derogating from fundamental human rights. 'Being able to demonstrate proper legal authorisation and appropriate oversight of the use of such intrusive intelligence activity may become a major future issue for the intelligence community, if the public at large is to be convinced of the desirability of such intelligence capability' Sir Omand said such information maybe held in national records, covered by Data Protection legislation, but it might also be held offshore by other nations or by global companies. 'Access to such information...might well be the key to effective pre-emption in future terrorist cases.

'Such sources have always been accessible to traditional law enforcement seeking evidence against a named suspect already justified by reasonable suspicion of having committed a crime.' 'However, application of modern data mining and processing techniques does involve examination of the innocent as well as the suspect to identify patterns of interest for further investigation'

In his latest column, “Courage Mr. Holder”, Pat Buchanan fires back at the pathetic comment by Obama Atty. Gen. Eric Holder that Whites are “cowards” for not blaming themselves for what Buchanan rightly points out are things done by the Black community to themselves.

A 70 percent illegitimacy rate in black America, an incarceration and crime rate seven times that of white America, a 50 percent dropout rate in many urban high schools, African-American graduates reading and computing on average at eighth-grade levels.

And about these problems what is the black leadership doing?

Unlike Bill Cosby, the heroic Holder was virtually mute. Rather, he is upset that “on Saturdays and Sundays” we don’t go to church or hang out together. But why are the free associations of Americans, of whatever creed or color, any of Eric Holder or Big Brother’s business? Having insulted us, perhaps Holder will start doing his own sworn duty. For one area where he has a lead role is enforcing the nation’s laws — in particular, the U.S. immigration laws. For the federal failure to enforce these laws is a contributory cause of one of those “unaddressed social problems in the poorest parts of the country.” Case in point — rampant unemployment among minority youth.

According to the Center for Immigration Studies, among African-Americans 18 to 29 with only a high-school degree, unemployment is now 20 percent. Among black adults who do not have a high-school diploma, it is 24 percent. Among teenagers under 18, black unemployment is 30 percent. Among native-born Hispanics with only a high-school diploma, the unemployment rate is 13.6 percent. Among high-school dropouts, 16 percent. Among Hispanic 16- and 17-year-olds, the jobless figure is 40 percent.

As these figures were compiled in December, before the last two months of sweeping layoffs, they surely understate the situation. And with both black and Hispanic dropout rates now reaching 50 percent in major cities, the social dynamite is piling up. Last month, USA Today reported that the FBI estimates there are now 1 million gang members in the United States — up 200,000 from 2005 — and these gangs are responsible for 80 percent of all U.S. crimes. From other studies, young Hispanics are 19 times as likely as white youth to join gangs, while African-Americans are 15 times.

These millions of teenagers, and unskilled and less-educated young adults with no jobs and little prospect of finding them, are recruiting pools for criminal gangs. Who is getting the jobs for which these native-born black and Hispanic young could qualify? Illegal aliens hold literally millions of them. Last week, the CIS reported, “An estimated 6 to 7 million illegal immigrants are currently holding jobs. Prior research indicates they are overwhelmingly employed in lower-skilled and lower-paid jobs.” Exactly what sort of jobs? “Illegals are primarily employed in construction, building cleaning and maintenance, food preparation, service and processing, transportation and moving occupations and agriculture.” With the exception of agriculture, a majority of the workers in these occupations are native-born Americans. Thus, illegal aliens are taking jobs Americans are not only willing to do, but are doing, and taking 7 million of these jobs from young Americans now out of work. By failing to enforce U.S. immigration laws, the government of the United States is selling America’s working class down the river. In addition to the 7 million illegals holding jobs,

An article recently published in a British local Newspaper.

Mrs. Irene Graham of Thorpe Avenue , Boscombe, delighted the audience with her reminiscence of the German prisoner of war who was sent each week to do her garden. He was repatriated at the end of 1945, she recalled - 'He'd always seemed a nice friendly chap, but when the crocuses came up in the middle of our lawn in February 1946, they spelt out 'Heil Hitler.'" (Bournemouth Evening Echo)

Statement of Congressman Ron Paul United States House of Representatives End the Fed

February 25, 2009

The Federal Reserve's low interest rate policy is a big mistake; it is not a panacea.

Artificially low interest rates are achieved by inflating the money supply. Low interest rates penalize the thrifty and those who save are cheated. It promotes consumption and borrowing over savings and investing. Manipulating interest rates is an immoral act. It's economically destructive.

The policy of artificially low interest rates caused our problems and therefore cannot be the solution. The market rate of interest is crucial information for the smooth operation of the economy. A central bank setting interest rates is price fixing and is a form of central economic planning. Price fixing is a tool of socialists and destroys production. Central bankers, politicians, and bureaucrats can't know what the proper rate should be. They lack the knowledge and are deceived by their own aggrandizement.

Manipulating the money supply and interest rates rejects all the principles of the free market. Ironically free markets and sound money generates low rates, but unlike the artificially low rates orchestrated by the Fed, the information conveyed is beneficial to investors and savers. The Congress, by conceding this authority, conveys extraordinary economic power to the elite few. This is a power that has been abused throughout history. Only the Federal Reserve can inflate the currency, creating new money and credit out of thin air, in secrecy, without oversight or supervision. Inflation facilitates deficits, needless wars and excessive welfare spending.

Debasement of a currency is counterfeiting. It steals value from every dollar earned or saved. It robs the people and makes them poorer. It is the enemy of the working man. Inflation is the most vicious and regressive of all forms of taxation. It transfers wealth from the middle-class to the privileged rich. The economic chaos that results from a policy of central bank inflation inevitably leads to political instability and violence. It's an ancient tool of all authoritarians. Inflating is never a benefit to freedom loving people. It destroys prosperity and feeds the fires of war. It is responsible for recessions and depressions. It's deceptive, addictive and causes delusions of grandeur with regards to wealth and knowledge. Wealth cannot be achieved by creating money by fiat. It instead destroys wealth and it rewards the special interests.

Depending on monetary fraud for national prosperity or a reversal of our downward spiral is riskier than depending on the lottery.

Inflation has been used to pay for all wars and empires. And they all end badly. Inflationism and corporatism engenders protectionism and trade wars. It prompts scapegoating: blaming foreigners, illegal immigrants, ethnic minorities, and too often freedom itself for the predictable events and suffering that result. Besides, the whole process is unconstitutional. There is no legal authority to operate such a monetary system. So let's stop it. Let's restore a policy of prosperity, peace, and liberty.

The time has come. Let's End the Fed.
